

Four choirs join for carol concert

THE Nantwich Choral Society concert of carols made nonsense of the fear that Christmas has become a mere commercial money-maker.

For St. Mary's Parish Church was full to capacity with not one choir but four choirs which had come together to sing the traditional carols and to listen to others not so well known.

As choir one, the Nantwich Choral Society sang with true feeling and a lovely warm tone. They thoroughly enjoyed the challenge of settings by some of our country's finest modern composers.

Choir number two was a group of young choristers representing Wrenbury parish church with choir-master Philip Crookall. As well as some traditional songs they delighted the audience with a modern carol "Why not buy an extra present" by M. Sammes

Choirs three and four comprised all the children in the audience and the audience itself and when all joined forces it was a fine sound and a real beginning to Christmas.

In overall charge was the conductor Stephen Buckman and the accompanist was Joy Roberts.

Nantwich Chronicle

Nantwich Choral Society

CAROLS

FOR CHOIR AND AUDIENCE

Joy Roberts, pianoforte

conducted by
Stephen Buckman

Subsidised by the National Federation of Music Societies from funds provided by the Arts Council of Great Britain.