

● Nantwich Choral Society is to welcome singers from Lüdenscheld in Germany at a concert in Nantwich Parish Church on June 27

German guests to feature at choral concert

NANTWICH Choral Society is set to raise the roof with a special concert featuring exchange singers from Germany.

The choir and their friends from Lüdenscheld will present a programme of well-known works by Haydn at Nantwich Parish Church on June 27.

Together they will combine to make a giant choir of 140 singers – and plans are being made to give the German guests a memorable stay in the area with a sight-seeing tour of Nantwich and Chester.

Society chairman Elizabeth Lea said: "A few weeks ago we visited Germany for a joint performance with the Oratorienchor Lüdenscheld choir in their home town."

"Singers from Nantwich stayed with members of the German choir and now it's our turn to offer the same warm welcome."

"It's wonderful to see international links and great friendships made through the love of music."

Conducted by the society's acclaimed musical director John Naylor, the programme will include Harmoniemesse – one of the most popular works penned by the Austrian music maestro.

There will also be the historic Missa in Tempore Belli written in August 1796 at the time of Austria's mobilisation for war against Napoleon.

The evening will be supported by the Northern Concordia Orchestra which includes many of the region's top orchestral players.

Singing solo will be soprano Franziska Förster from Lüdenscheld, Harriet Goodwin, a former 'Singer of the World' finalist, Sam Odaleinde, a tenor who recently graduated from the choir of St John's College Cambridge and Paul Henly, a Shrewsbury-based singing teacher making his debut with NCS.

Elizabeth added: "Out of Haydn's many brilliant compositions, the six last great masses represent the greatness of his genius. St Mary's Church will be filled with some of the most thrilling music in the choral repertoire."

● Tickets can be bought at the church shop, on the door and online at WeGotTickets.com

Nantwich Choral Society

German treat at choir show

Exchange singers join choral society in showcase of Haydn

By Carla Flynn
carla.flynn@nqnw.co.uk

NANTWICH Choral Society is set to raise the roof with a special concert featuring exchange singers from Germany.

The choir and their friends from Lüdenscheld will present a programme of well-known works by Haydn at Nantwich Parish Church on June 27.

Together they will combine to make a giant choir of 140 singers – and plans are being made to give the German guests a memorable stay in the area with a sight-seeing tour of Nantwich and Chester.

Society Chairman Elizabeth Lea said: "A few weeks ago we visited Germany for a joint performance with the Oratorienchor Lüdenscheld choir in their home town."

"Singers from Nantwich stayed with members of the German choir and now it's our turn to offer the same warm welcome. It's wonderful to see international links and great friendships made through the love of music."

Conducted by the society's acclaimed musical director John Naylor, the programme will include Harmoniemesse – one of the most popular works penned by the Austrian music maestro.

There will also be the historic Missa in tempore belli written in August 1796 at the time of Austria's mobilisation for the coming war against Napoleon's invasion.

The evening will be supported by the Northern Concordia Orchestra which includes many of the region's top orchestral players.

Singing solo will be soprano Franziska Förster from Lüdenscheld; Harriet Goodwin, a former 'Singer of the World' finalist; Sam Odaleinde, a tenor who recently graduated from the choir of St John's College Cambridge; and Paul Henly, a Shrewsbury-based singing teacher making his debut with NCS.

Elizabeth added: "Out of Haydn's many brilliant compositions, the six last great masses represent the greatness of his genius. St Mary's Church will be filled with some of the most thrilling music in the choral repertoire."

Tickets can be bought at the church shop, on the door and online at wegottickets.com.